FAMOUS FIRSTS BY AMERICAN WOMEN

A timeline about famous firsts by American women includes such notable figures as the first published author in 1650 (Anne Bradstreet), Elizabeth Blackwell receiving her medical degree in 1849, to astronaut Dr. Peggy Whitson, who became the commander of the International Space Station in 2007. Included the 2008 elections during which Senator Hillary Clinton won the New Hampshire presidential primary, the first woman to do so, and Alaskan Governor Sarah Palin became the first female vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket.
